

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

"THE FOUR NUTS"
By DADDYCHAPTER VI
The Feast Underground

HACKEE CHIPMUCK chuckled and chuckled. He thought he had a great joke on Dame Instinct.

And so he had. As fairy godmother of the birds and beasts she had taught him to keep away from humans. Then she, herself, had called while Jack and Janet were with her, and had wondered why he had not come. He hadn't come because he was doing just what she had taught him.

Dame Instinct took the joke good-naturedly. "Some time I'll have a joke on you," she said. "And now I want you to meet my friends, Janet Chipmuck and Jack Chipmuck."

"Pleased to meet you," said Hackee Chipmuck, still chuckling. He had no idea that the joke was already on him, for Jack and Janet were none other than the humans from whom he had hidden only a few minutes before. Dame Instinct was, so much flustered by Hackee Chipmuck's joke on her and so much pleased over her joke on Hackee Chipmuck that she forgot all about why she had come into his burrow—which was to seek the summer bird which was singing spring songs in the autumn woods.

Dame Instinct took the joke good-naturedly

"I am honored to have you call upon me, dear fairy godmother," said Hackee Chipmuck to Dame Instinct. "I hope you will be able to stay to dinner."

Jack and Janet hoped so, too. They were very hungry, and besides they were anxious to see what a chipmuck dinner would be like. They looked eagerly at Dame Instinct, who nodded her head.

"We would be glad to stay," said Dame Instinct, "but I am afraid we would be putting your kind wife, Mother Chipmuck, to a great deal of trouble."

"Not at all!" declared Hackee Chipmuck. "We will all help to set the table and clear it afterward. I will see where mother and the children are." Hackee Chipmuck ran to one of the tunnels leading from the sitting room and began to chirp briskly. "Chip! chip! chip!" he said. The answer was a scrambling in the tunnel and in came Mother Chipmuck followed by a boy and girl chipmuck no larger than Jack and Janet. The cheeks of all the chipmucks were bulging with nuts, for all had been out helping to gather the winter store of food.

"Here is company, mother," said Hackee Chipmuck. Mother Chipmuck and the children got rid of their nuts and greeted the visitors politely. Jack and Janet learned that the boy chipmuck's name was Chip Chipmuck and the girl chipmuck's name was Chipper Chipmuck.

"We will have dinner right away!" said Mother Chipmuck, and she was as good as her word, for in almost less time than it takes to tell, she and Hackee Chipmuck and the children spread a feast of nuts and corn and grain on the floor of the sitting room.

Jack and Janet had been doubtful whether they would like chipmuck fare, but they found that now they were chipmucks, the dinner of nuts and corn and wheat was as delicious as a dinner of turkey, pumpkin pie and ice cream at Thanksgiving time. They pitched in and ate until they could eat no more. Then Hackee Chipmuck and his wife thrifflily gathered up the crumbs that were left and put them back in the store room to be used for supper, while the others cleaned away the nut shells.

"Now," said Hackee Chipmuck, "how would you like a little nap?" That is just what Jack and Janet thought they would like. Hackee Chipmuck led them to a soft couch of grass and fur, and in a dozen winks they were sound asleep.

But they hadn't slept long when Chip Chipmuck and Chipper Chipmuck came creeping to their bed. The two young chipmucks were planning an adventure, under ground—an adventure in which fun and excitement were to be mixed.

(What that adventure is will be told in next Tuesday.)

The Daily Fun Hour

WORD-CHESS

The leader, called the Pawn, uses the language of chess-problems, substituting words for the chessman, as, for instance, "Change bird to cage in five moves." The change is effected thus, "1-bird, 2-bare, 3-cage, 4-care 5-page." It will be noted that, through all changes, the word contains the same number of letters, and that each new letter is placed in the position of the letter dropped.

All the players are provided with pencils and paper, and when the pawn announces the head and tail words, all start to work at once. The player finishing first scores a point for each letter in the original two words given out, as eight points for bird and cage. Sometimes the Pawn does not limit the number of moves, and, in that case, the player first finishing with the fewest moves wins the highest score. Any other player finishing as promptly, or even more promptly, but using a greater number of words to complete the chain also scores, but has one point deducted from his total for each extra word.

Other illustrations of Word-Chess. Change lead to gold; 1-lead, 2-load 3-goat, 4-gold. Change boy to man; 1-boy, 2-bay, 3-ban, 4-man. Some contrasting words take many moves, as changing black to white; 1-black, 2-slack, 3-slick, 4-slice, 5-spice, 6-space 7-spade, 8-shade, 9-shale, 10-whale, 11-white and 12-white. This game was invented by no less a personage than Professor C. L. Dodgson, the eminent English mathematician, better known to young readers by his pen-name, "Lewis Carroll" and his "Alice-in-Wonderland" books.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO DIE

to win. There are many people who think that a policy of life insurance is merely a protection to those whom they may leave behind, that the insured has "to die to win."

NOTHING OF THE KIND

You can realize on your policy at any time, there are forms under which you are to be paid an annuity in your declining years. Insurance is a protection to yourself in life and to your dear ones in case of death. You owe it to yourself and them to secure such protection.
